One of the Straws

THE MENACE is editorially raked by the papist press from time to time for daring to insinuate that Rome has a slave Mercy is perfect. The sisters are not system of her own, that girls are rail-roaded into the H. O. G. Our stories of Romish cruelty have the ability to hide reduced to a false, and yet we cannot fail to note in institutions conducted by the Roman the news columns of the daily and weekly Catholic church are the epitome of per newspapers frequent accounts of injuries fection; the soul of cleanliness and morn received in trying to escape; trying or-deals of victims who have felt the clutch; death, despair and misery following the footsteps of the hunted ones; haboar corpus proceedings to secure the release of girls held, etc. In many places the courts seem to be in league with the keepers of these papal prisons.

A late instance is that of the case Pearl Brooks, aged 16, who is held in a House of the Good Shepherd in Memphis, Tenn. Her father is poor and is not in the best of condition to care for her but The blindly obedient Knights seem to have been scared off the bigot hunting game by the appearance of the Free failing test of a papal agent is his product. THE MENACE army is growing rapidly, adding to its numbers those who believe it to be just as honorable to be aggressive in defending our free institutions as it is for the pope's minions to be aggressive in their attack upon popular educations. The sisters. The girls at the House of Mercy, some of them, revolted and started a young riot because of intolerable conditions. Thomas F. Turl. When you come to think of it, aggressiveness is not such a wicked thing as some might atory, and by such action she best the attorney to the situation and closed the door to what might have been an interesting investigation.

The magistrate stated that in his nicety. Always the word goes out that Yet all the power of the church is brought against any attempt to seen legal inspection to satisfy the people the all is well. are housed and treated. In dodging publicity the papes are expert. In 'coming from under' when an overt aet committed by a pricet cause the finger of the law to beckon them into the legal sanctuary for judgment, Priests Schmidt, Mullen and Fitzpatrick have demonstrated the effectiveness of Romish influence. It works the other way, too. The murderer of Father Zebris, of Now Britain, Conn., must hang, though he also committed the blunder of murdering a policeman. Perhaps it is for killing the cop that he is to hang, though we do not doubt that if he possessed two lives he would be hung twice-once for the priest and once for the cop.
